

HOT ROD GIRLS SAVE THE WORLD SYNOPSIS

When big city newspaper reporter Vanessa Trojan (Lindsay Calkins) goes to a small backwater town, named Anywhere, Washington, to do a feature article on two female Street Racing icons, she doesn't realize that this will be the last article she ever writes. When the icons- the always talkative Jo Leene Dodge (Melene Marie Brown) and permanently mute Betty Petty (Kimberly Layfield) take Vanessa to a rukus rockabilly house party, a stange light appears from the sky, and people start to feel sick. The party ends in a vicious brawl between Jo Leene and jealous rival Vikki Lee (Heather Lewis).

The next day Jo Leene is accused of killing Vikki Lee, who has disappeared with only her severed fingers found on the seat of her wrecked car. As more people turn up missing or murdered Anywhere's only detective- Detective LLOYD (Jimmi Davies) soon realizes that this is not a simple murder case, but something much, much bigger.

As the girls, aided by Betty's blind punk rock grandma (J Heflin) struggle to discover what is happening to Anywhere, an alien boy (Malcolm Brown) suddenly appears and may actually hold the key to all the carnage.

Hot Rods, Hot Dames, Half Zombies and Aliens all converge on the small town as it quickly falls into campy B-Budget movie chaos. Can the Hot Rod Girls Save The Town? Can They Save The World? Find out- in the Black & White, Lo-Fi, "Sure to be a drive-in classic" film by musician turned writer/director- D.A. Sebastian.
